NEW YORK FASHIONS

Comparatively inexpensive but extremely smart and pretty frocks are made from figured or plain nets. These nets can be obtained in all colors, both light tints and dark pastel shades. Black net especially is very popular for evening wear. Very often an old silk or satin frock can be made into an exquisite evening gown by making for it an over-drapery of net in the same shade. These draperies are very simple, the skirt very often has an upper portion lengthened by a circular flounce; the upper part as a rule is short in the front—reaching about to the knee and slopes down at the back to any desired depth, even to the hem if desired. The favored trimmings are bands of net embroidered in flow and trimmed, as often as net, with sequins of gold, silver or bronze. Occasionally gold braid, cord or lace are introduced in these net bands and make a charming form of adornment. Contrary to expectation these trimmings are not at all expensive in the simple designs.

Evening Wraps
Evening wraps can be as simple or as elaborate as one wishes this season. Perhaps the most expensive of the really smart wraps takes the form of the plain military cape of broadcloth. These are usually lined and are very pretty in rose, pale blue or champagne. A very stylish and serviceable cape on this order is of the army blue trimmed with brass buttons a la militaire and lined with bright red.

For trimmings are seen on many of the handsome wraps. Sometimes there is only a slight touch of fur, such as outlining the armhole or bordering the collar and cuffs and sometimes the entire wrap

OUR STATE LIBRARIES

Written for the Middletown New Century Club

There are fifteen libraries in the State of Delaware, only four of them, Wilmington Institute library, Dover library, Corbit library at Odessa and Seaford library, being free. The State Library Commission at Dover has sixty-six traveling libraries. These are loaned for three months, returned, and other books sent in their places, if requested. Any school district may borrow these traveling libraries, and the secretary and librarian of the commission are glad to give information on the subject to any one. We think it is perhaps not generally known that a public library may be established, and funds secured, in any school district, under the law passed on March 31st, 1903, when appropriations shall be made by school taxation. The working of this law was fully explained by Henry Ridgely, Jr., Esq., of Dover, at the sixth annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, held in Dover in 1903. The handbook of the State Library Commission for Delaware, is an interesting pamphlet, and well worth reading. Mr. Manlove Hayes of Dover, is chairman, Mr. T. N. Wilson, secretary, and Miss Ida V. Culbreth, librarian of the commission.

The Wilmington Institute Free Library is, of course, the largest library in the state. The constitution for the Wilmington Institute, as it was then called, was drawn up in January, 1788. This constitution decreed that any one could be a subscriber upon the payment of forty shillings, then a dollar annually, as long as he remained a member. In January, 1894, it was changed into a free library, when any person signing an application

William P. Taylor is president and Mr. Fred H. Robinson secretary and treasurer of the Library Board. Mr. Arthur L. Bailey is librarian, and has eighteen assistants.

The Dover State Library at Dover contains 40,000 volumes and is the second largest in the state. It is growing very rapidly. After several different trials the library was established in 1885. The Dover Library Company was incorporated on March 24th, 1885, by an Act of Assembly with an authorized capital of $2,500. On April 6th, the stockholders met, adopted by-laws and elected nine directors with Mr. Manlove Hayes president of the Board. There are two classes of subscriptions—the life subscription, at $25.00, and the annual subscription, at $3.00. Three hundred volumes were presented by friends, two directors sent to Philadelphia to purchase books, and on the 8th of June, 1885, the library was opened to subscribers. At the end of the first year they had 4,152 volumes. All the popular magazines are placed on the tables, and after one month are issued as books, to subscribers. In 1887, they purchased the property known as the Cogswell property on State street, at a cost of $2,669, for the use of the library. The librarian is Mr. H. Ridgely Harrington.

The Corbit Library at Odessa contains 5,068 volumes. It is free for the use of the residents of School District No. 61, only. There are 261 cards in use. This library has existed for a number of years and was endowed by Dr. James Corbit and Mr. Daniel Corbit, both of Odessa, and Dr. William B. Corbit, of Washington, D. C. The last named left $10,000 for the use of the library upon the death of his wife which occurred about two years ago. The librarian is Miss Mary Aspell.

The New Castle Library contains about 5,000 volumes, and has about fifty members, a very small membership for a town of the size of New Castle, but it is probable that many of the residents of the town make use of the Wilmington library. This library is supported by endowment and subscription, though one cannot see how they get much money from subscription, when there are only fifty members. The librarian is Miss R. A. Challenger.

The Dover Library which is distinct from the Dover State Library, was incorporated and opened in 1885, and made free and public on January 14th, 1902. It contains nearly five thousand volumes, and 1,028 applications for membership have been filed. They receive an appropriation from the state, a town appropriation, three yearly contributions from private citizens and interest from an endowment fund of $1,000 raised by the ladies of the Dover Century Club. This library is entitled to a state dividend each year, under the law passed in 1903, probably about $125, and the school board must raise for them any sum between $250 and $800, as is thought best, but not less than $250. The Ladies' Library Club has helped quite a little, chiefly in gifts of books. The librarian is Miss Beatrice Mast.

The Historical Society of Delaware, in Wilmington, has an especially interesting library. The Constitution of the Society says: "The object of the Society shall be the elucidation of history, particularly such portions as may refer to this state." The Society was organized on May 31st, 1864, by the executive committee of the Wilmington Institute, who made Hon. Willard Hall chairman of the meeting for organization. When the officers were elected, only one, Mr. John Jones, was a resident of Middletown. The donations to the Society, as told of in the society pamphlet, are interesting, and among the donors one may notice the names of Major Jones, Mrs. Lydia Rothwell, Z. McD. Roberts and Thomas Skee Merritt, from this town. The members are from different parts of this state and other states. The building which this society occupies is itself historical, being next to Old Swedes Church, probably the most ancient church edifice in the state. As the earliest structure of The First Presbyterian Church in Delaware, and the third place of worship in Wilmington, the quaint building and the cemetery adjacent form a center of interest to all. In the cemetery lie the remains of Delaware's first governor, Dr. John McKinly. Dr. McKinly was captured by a detachment of British soldiers in the night following the battle of Brandywine, and kept prisoner for a year. In this cemetery also lie the remains of Gunning Bedford, first judge of the District Court of the United States for Delaware. Within this historical building are many interesting objects, too many for one to enumerate, but visitors are welcome and if you will look through the register, you will find the name of the writer of this paper on its pages. The library of this interesting society has 4,041 catalogued volumes, and about one-third as many uncatalogued. The president is the Hon. Willard Hall, and the librarian, the Rev. Willard H. Hinkley. The Smyrna Library was established about 1892 and contains some valuable books. There are now between three and four thousand books on the shelves, treating of a most every subject. It is still a subscription library, but at the nominal price of $1.00 per year, it is within the reach of all who desire to use it. Miss Anna Hough is the librarian.

A number of years ago, a library existed in Newark, then for a long time the town was without a library. In March, 1908, it was re-organized by the New Century Club with only a few volumes. Now there are 2,400 volumes, and one hundred subscriptions. The library is supported by subscription, and once a year the people of the town join with the library board and give an entertainment, the proceeds for the library. The librarian is Miss Leta Waters.

The Milford Library contains about 3,600 volumes and has eighty-three members. It was established about twenty-five years ago. It is open three evenings and one afternoon during the week, and a day a week. It gives an entertainment to help pay expenses and buy additional books. They subscribe for eight of the standard magazines. A magazine share can be bought for fifty cents a year, so the magazines are taken out just as the books are, as there is no reading room.

The Seaford Library has 508 volumes, and more than three hundred readers, a remarkable membership, averaging less than two volumes to a member. One feels like saying "Hurray for Seaford!" It is a free public library and the library committee makes money in a good old way—having a rummage sale. A small amount of money has been donated, and quite a number of books have been given. The library is in the Acorn Club room, and the club furnishes light and heat during the winter months. The librarian's salary and expenses during the summer months are paid out of the library fund. The librarian is Miss Mae Cooper.

Delaware College at Newark has a library for the benefit of the college students.

The Brownson Library Association, the German Library Association and the Shields Library Association partake of the nature of social clubs, but each has its own fine library.

The Girls' Industrial School of Wilmington has a library of 1,100 volumes and a number of subscriptions to magazines are given the school by friends. We feel rather proud of this library, as the Industrial School is supported by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the state, and many of us have the pleasure of adding our mite to assist in this good work.

Last, but very far from the least, is our own public library. Residents of Middletown have, at different dates, tried to establish a library here. At the time of the establishment of the first library, a meeting was held in the Sunday school room of Forest Church, by a number of interested persons, with Mr. Edward Reynolds chairman of the meeting. They secured funds enough to start the library, and Mr. Reynolds went to Philadelphia to buy the books. The library was opened in a room on the third floor of the Opera House, and after a time was removed to a room in the house now occupied by Mrs. H. V. Farvis, this room being by Victor Green's office. Still later it was removed to Mr. D. L. Dunning's store, from which place the books became scattered and lost. After some years, the members of the Irving Lyceum collected money and bought books for a library, known as the Irving Lyceum Library, and this library was kept in our own club room. They had no regular librarian, and in time this library also became a thing of the past.

In 1901, a number of ladies, many of them members of this club, decided that they could and would have a public library in this town; and when a woman makes up her mind to do anything, nothing on earth can prevent her. With one hundred dollars and a few gifts of books, the women opened the library on June 15th, 1901, in a room on North Broad Street. There were about one hundred members, each paying $1.00 a year. One year later, the library was removed to the room over the post-office which it now occupies. There are 1,900 volumes and one hundred members. Sometimes the Board holds a rummage sale and bake to increase the library fund. Occasionally someone presents us with a few books. Each year the New Century Club makes the library a Christmas gift of ten dollars' worth of books, but we are afraid we were forgotten during the bargain hunt last Christmas, as the books have not yet reached the library. Recently some valuable books belonging to the old Irving Lyceum Library have been given to the library. Miss Marion Costigan is the president of the Board, Mrs. M. B. Borris vice-president, Mrs. Charles Derrickson secretary, and Mrs. J. L. Shepherd treasurer. Mrs. C. A. Haddock is the librarian. If you want to know anything more about our own library, come up to the library after this club adjourns, pay us a dollar and we will show you into all the secrets of the Middletown Public Library.

Chairman Library Committee of N. C. Club.

HOW ARROWS WERE POISONED

An old Cherokee Indian recently told how the Indians of former times used to poison their arrowsheads for war purposes or for killing bears. According to the Denver Field and Farm, they took a fresh deer liver, fastened it to a long pole, and then went to certain places where they would find rattlesnakes in abundance. About midday the rattlers are all out of their dens, coiled up in the sunshine. The bucks would poke the first rattler with the liver on the long pole. A rattler, unlike common snakes, always shows fight in preference to escaping. The snake would then repeatedly strike at the liver with its fangs until its poison was all used up, whereupon it would quit striking and slowly to move on. The bucks would then hunt up another and repeat the performance, keeping up the work until the liver was well soaked with snake poison.

Then the pole was carried home and fastened somewhere in an upright position until the liver became as dry as a bone. The liver was pushed to the powder and placed in a buckskin bag, to be used as needed for their arrows. This powder would stick like glue to any moistened surface.

EVERY STAMP A BULLET IN THE FIGHT

New York, November 8th, 1908.—The American Red Cross has just made the announcement that the Red Cross Christmas Stamp is soon to be placed on sale in all parts of the State. The stamp is of an attractive design selected from 1200 submitted in competition. The Society has already ordered 30,000,000 but it is expected that 50,000,000 will be sold by Christmas. These stamps will be used as "Stickers" on gifts, packages and letters during the holiday season.

In this State the Red Cross and the State Charities Aid Association are co-operating in promoting the sale of this stamp through their local organization. The plan agreed upon, is that the Red Cross furnish the stamps and the necessary advertising matter to the local agents, who will supervise the sale and receive four-fifths of the proceeds to fighting tuberculosis in the locality, the remaining one-fifth reverting to the American Red Cross to pay expenses. Many localities are seizing this opportunity to start a substantial fund to be used in fighting the white plague. Among the cities and towns reached directly through the local organizations of the Red Cross and State Charities Aid Association are:

Albion, Altamont, Ballston Spa, Batavia, Boonville, Brockport, Brookfield, Cambridge, Canandaigua, Canton, Carmel, Cohoes, Cortland, Cuba, De Ruyter, Dobbs Ferry, Dryden, Dundee, Ellenville, Elmira, Fonda, Fulton, Geneva, Hornell, Middletown, Oswego, Palmyra, Rome, Sandy Hill, Schenectady, Warrensburg, Warsaw, Waterloo, Watertown, Westport, Whitesboro, White Plains, Allens Hill, Clifton Springs, East Bloomfield, Gorham, Honey, Seneca Castle, Stanley, Naples, Binghamton, Hudson, Poughkeepsie and Syracuse.

The Rochester Public Health Association has already ordered 50,000 stamps and the Buffalo Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis has also made application. Permission has been obtained to sell the stamps in all the Post-offices of the country. Newspapers, bill posting associations, street cars and churches are all interested in the sale. The advertising matter supplied by the Red Cross includes posters, placards and attractive publicity circulars. The stamps will probably not be placed on sale before Thanksgiving day, but after that time they will be available in stationery stores, drug stores, schools, churches, postoffices and many other headquarters will be established in the various cities.

Mr. Ernest P. Bicknell, Director of the American National Red Cross, states "that in 1908 the Red Cross Christmas stamps were sold in thirty-five states and territories and $135,000 to be devoted solely to forwarding anti-tuberculosis work was the result."

DO YOUR BEST

Every young man has seasons with himself when he wonders if he is on the right track. He ponders over his tasks and seems unable to determine whether he is cut out for success or failure. These times come to every young fellow and discourage often follows. The young man who does not think about his own welfare and future is not bound for success, and will discover some day that a little introspection applied at intervals would have been a good thing. Every fellow who has these experiences should remember one thing, and that is that if he is doing the very best he knows how in the place he is filling he is doing all that can be asked of him, and that if he is doing this and the place is not the one in which he belongs or where his efforts will tell for the most, the time will come when the wider opportunities will present themselves.

The most important work any man has to do is that task that is before him today. The future is made up of to-morrows, but the present is what counts. If to-day is what counts. If to-day is taken care of and the end of the day's work shows that you have done your best, permitted no opportunities to pass you by, you may be sure that you have accomplished what you set out for, and daily accomplishments are what future successes are made of. No building was ever built that stood the test of time and storm unless the foundation was right. The builders may have struck and pocketed, soft clay and cavities, but they kept on and on, and when the foundation was completed and each piece of work and each step in the progress of the work what it should be, they found the building to be secure and able to stand almost any strain. The work of to-day is the foundation of to-morrow. Build your foundation right and the building is sure to stand.

A RISING YOUNG ARTIST
The Sunday Star, under the caption of "Wilmington's Colony of Artists" is printing a series of sketches of the lives and the works of the thirty or forty artists who are associated with what is popularly known as the Howard Pyle School of Artists; many of whom are from New England and the West, and but one, Stanley M. Arthurs from this State!

In its issue of last Sunday the Star gave, as No. 2 in this series, a very appreciative biographical sketch of Mr. Stanley M. Arthurs originally of Kenton, Del., but whose studio is now at 1816 Rodney Street, Wilmington, Del.

Among other of his work The Star's article referred to one of Mr. Arthurs' paintings that has become quite well known: "The Meeting of the Ways," which was hung at the water color exhibit of the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia last winter. The scene graphically depicts an old-time coach drawn by four horses, meeting one of the early railroad trains of the "Rocket" pattern. Later Mr. Arthurs painted in colors a series of four pictures illustrating an article written by himself for Scribner's styled "The Old Boston Post Road." The article is a creditable piece of literary work and the illustrations are done in a masterly manner, the whole forming a beautiful artistic group. The originals of these paintings, like the "Meeting of the Ways," have all but one been sold in this country.

The Star says "not only in this country has the young artist's work attracted attention but it has received favorable comment from one of the leading international societies of artists in Paris. In this country Mr. Arthurs is connected with the Society of Illustrators, the Salamagundi Club, of New York and the Franklin Inn Club, of Philadelphia."

For a number of years Mr. Arthurs chiefly confined his labors to illustrations—often in colors for Harpers, Scribners, McClures, Saturday Evening Post, etc but is now entering the broader field of historical painting proper. He has just returned from St. Paul, Minn., with a commission to paint a large canvass illustrative of an episode in one of the Minnesota regiments in their attack on Little Rock, Ark., in the late Civil War, whither the artist, a few months since, went to get accurate historical data, "local coloring" etc. The painting is to adorn the wall of one of the rooms in the handsome new State Capitol of the North Star State in St. Paul.

THE TRANSCRIPT always chronicles with participant pride all worthy achievements of our "Blue Hen's Chickens" in any field of notable endeavor, and while felicitating the talented young artist on his past success, adds its warmest wishes of newer and greater accomplishments.

Mr. Arthurs is the son of Mr. Joshua M. Arthurs, whose sudden death was noted in these columns recently and his mother, Nancy M. Arthurs is a sister of Mrs. Sylvia A. Burris of our town.

Mr. Arthurs, we are told, has a young sister, Miss Susie, who not long since received $250 for her first effort in the way of illustration—which for a wholly self-taught amateur is not bad.

THE GUNNING SEASON

Many Sportsmen Will be Out on Monday
The pleasant that isn't up and doing on Monday morning by the peep of day, is likely to be a dead one by nightfall, because that day, November 15th, is to be execution day for the pleasant while throughout the Diamond State, and all through hill, dale and valley, wherever there is the slightest likelihood that this truly game bird is to be found, shot-guns in the hands of sportsmen, near sportsmen and the downright gamebirds are to track from dawn to dark.

Pheasant shooting is not what it used to be. The bird, under the high pressure of many seasons of close hunting, has become shy and are to be found, in numbers, only in inaccessible places.

That is, the places are inaccessible to most people, but the hunters know most of them tolerably well and not a few sportsmen have favorite spots marked down for the opening day of the season.

The season will close on December 31st. In addition to pheasant, it also will be lawful on Monday to shoot partridge, quail, rabbit and squirrel, the former three until December 31st, inclusive, and the latter until January 1st, inclusive.

Rabbits are reported to be plentiful, but farmers are hostile. There are more reports from than ever before, and the signs "Keep off" is said, will have more meaning this year than formerly.

In fact the time seems to be at hand when the shotgun in Delaware will be an unpopular weapon with the rural population. The fact has been noted, and scarier, and this in spite of more or less rigid legislation.

This year the conditions are favorable to the gunners. The long drought has prevented the young rabbits from being drowned in their burrows by rainstorms as many were formerly.

CORN GROWERS' PROGRAM

The Delaware Corn Growers' Association has completed arrangements for the annual Delaware State Corn Show, to be held in Dover, November 18th, both forenoon and Representatives of Plant Industry at Washington will be the judges of the exhibits. Only corn grown in Delaware during 1909 can be exhibited in this show, and all exhibits must be delivered to A. E. Grantham, secretary of the association, at Dover not later than November 15th.

Alexander P. Corbit, of Odessa, president of the association, will make an opening address at 10:30 o'clock, and W. O. Collier, Easton, Md., president of the Maryland Cereal-Breeders' Association, will speak on "The Methods of a Successful Maryland Corn Grower." The report of the secretary and the annual election of officers will follow.

An afternoon session will begin at 1:30 o'clock. "Some Important Factors in Corn Improvement" will be the subject of an address by Professor N. Schmitz, Maryland Experiment Station, College Park, Md. Discussion is invited at the close of each address.

ENCOURAGE HOME ENTERPRISE

Encourage every home enterprise. Take an interest in every industry, invest liberally in the stock of faith and good will, and distribute it all over your town, in every factory, every work shop, every business house. It will pay you large dividends, and will cost very little. It can never depreciate in value. It will always be above par. Buy home made goods. Ask your merchants for them.

Wear home made garments, eat home made articles of food, sleep on home made beds, read home made newspapers. In this way the money you spend is only loaned. It will come back to you again with interest. Praise up your town—don't run it down. Stand by your merchants and manufacturers, they are the bone and sinew of your municipal structure. Stand by your churches and your schools—they are the hopes of your future. Stand by your press it is the tireless sentinel that guards your interest.

CHIEF CLERK RECOMMENDS PAROLE
Leonard Crawford, chief warden at the county workhouse, Tuesday suggested to the trustees of the prison that they recommend the pardoning of George Duffield and William J. Duffield and Potts are serving a year each, and their time will not be up until March and May respectively. Jas. Mitchell and James Butcher, the other two prisoners who tried to help Campbell, have been released, as they were short-term prisoners from the City court.

Graham, the prisoner who killed Campbell and who was shot and severely wounded by Guard Dorey, is able to be up and he has been moved from the hospital ward to his cell again. He does not know that he has been indicted for murder in the first degree.

DELEGATES REPORT

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Bethesda M. E. Church held at Mrs. A. G. Cox's, the following report of Mrs. Enoch G. Ailee was given who was a delegate from the local auxiliary to the Philadelphia Branch Convention which took place Oct. 13th, 14th and 15th at Wilmington.

Wednesday morning, at half past ten o'clock we arrived in Philadelphia, and went direct to Grace Church. When we reached there, the first thing was to register, and get on our badges. We were shown our places, and the delegates were seated according to the different conferences to which they belonged. There were eight conferences represented, the largest representation being from Pittsburgh. The delegates numbered about three hundred in all.

The convention opened with communion service, which lasted about one hour and was conducted by twelve ministers. It was very impressive. At the conclusion of this service, the president, Miss Susan C. Lodge of Lansdowne, Pa., made the opening remarks. Dr. Kellogg of Grace Church, in the absence of his wife, read her address of welcome, and Mrs. D. A. Sloan of Central Pennsylvania Conference, responded in a very few well chosen words. In conclusion she said: "Let us put into service all we are worth in thought, word, and deed." The committees were appointed next. Mrs. T. W. Wilcox, of Philadelphia, the Treasurer, reported $76,206.12 receipts for the year, $71,394.11 spent during the year, leaving a balance of $4,942.01. Wilmington Conference gave $2,027.77 in contributions, and $326.16 in thank offerings. At this time, several missionaries were introduced and also Miss E. Rose of Pennsylvania, an outgoing missionary, who called about the sixth of this month.

Then at the noon hour, delegates were taken around the Wilmington parks in automobiles. They had a lovely ride and enjoyed it very much. Lunch was served in the life church by the ladies of Wilmington.

At two o'clock the afternoon session began. Rev. W. L. White had charge of the devotional service, and Miss Grace Quigg conducted the music, which was very fine throughout the convention. Lucile F. Harrison represented the Children's Work. She said that a vision is needed in the work, and the one upon which she dwelt was the Light Bearers, this branch had 365 life members. She secured ten new members during the year, and Grace Auxiliary made Miss Florence Kellogg, a life member. One of the most interesting addresses of this session was by Miss C. J. Carleton of Mexico, South America, Bulgaria, and Italy. She said that the King's business requires haste and if the Church delays her duty at this time, the assistance of Christianity in foreign nations will be delayed.

The evening session was conducted by the young people's societies with Mrs. H. Campbell, the superintendent, presiding, and they gave a very fine entertainment.

Thursday morning, the convention opened with president, Miss Lodge, in the chair. She presides with much ease and grace. The first part of the session was taken up with an election of officers. Mrs. Caranahan, the corresponding secretary, continued her address on foreign missions where she had spent two years. She talked about India, Burma, and Malaysia. In India, the Philadelphia Branch missionaries, six, among them, Burma is a general school, and Malaysia has one boarding school, and a training school. Mrs. W. H. Pearce of Philadelphia, described the African slave trade, which was very interesting, and the Women's Foreign Missionary Society has been doing much for the freed slave, and she said that she thought it is to be regretted that so few of our Methodist sisters are members of the work in Japan. She said that the words of Jesus, "I have to tell you love one another," is the keynote of the work, her main thought was that Japan needs Christ. She has charge of the Bible women. Miss Virginia Campbell was a powerful speaker and truly emphasized the fact that there are few workers in Korea.

The evening session was an excellent address by Rev. Isaac T. Hoiland of Pekin, China.

Friday morning the devotional service was led by Rev. H. E. Turner, of New York, who was a most powerful speaker, and another address, several others spoke, and also Miss Winona Mulford, who is a life fire. There were several other things in the business line, and the convention closed with a consecration service by Miss C. J. Caranahan, presiding in by all, and we came home more enthusiastic for the work, as we learned of the great need of the Gospel in the foreign field.

WOMAN'S HOME INSTITUTE

The ladies of Middletown and vicinity were highly entertained and instructed at the Woman's Institute held in the Opera House on Wednesday. Mrs. Grace Day Brady, chairman of the committee, had for several days been using her utmost endeavor to make a homey and pleasant room and stage into an attractive place, and succeeded beyond one's expectations.

The stage was made a woodland scene, and with its autumn leaves and ferns, benches, its bright berries and chrysanthemums, made an ideal picture.

There was a display of woman's work, many of the ladies and circle artists being very dainty and pretty. An especially interesting exhibit was one of fancy work brought from the Philippine Islands by Foster McCrone and loaned by Mrs. I. R. McCrone. The display of drawings by the pupils of the public schools was interesting, and in many cases showing decided talent. Their writing also, was unusually good, and Mrs. Wells said it was a decidedly clever execution.

Mrs. Brady introduced Mrs. Wells, the first speaker, who told the object of the Woman's Institute. She said that it was to give the women a place where they could meet and discuss their problems, and to give them a chance to plan housework and morning glories. Miss Gray next told of the way to cut and cook meats and how to buy.

Mrs. Stephen M. Gray, of Toronto, Canada, gave an interesting talk on "Home Nursing." Prof. Webb of the Experiment Station of Delaware College, was introduced by Mrs. Wells, and told of the pleasure it gave him to be present at the Institute.

The afternoon session was opened with music, and Mrs. Mary Hutchins at the piano. Dr. D. W. Lewis gave a very able address on "The Woman's Work." Mrs. Simpson gave many good ideas on "First Aid to the Injured." This talk was especially instructive and if put in practice, would often be of great help in time of need.

Mrs. Frances Watkins of Odessa, gave an instrumental solo "Rattle of Spring," which was much enjoyed. Prof. Harry Hayward of Delaware College, gave a very interesting talk, it being intended more especially for the teachers and pupils of the schools. The public school was closed for the afternoon and most of the larger pupils were present to hear Prof. Hayward's address. He told the girls that the most honorable calling for a girl is to make a home, rather than go out in the world to earn a living.

Mrs. Wells spoke on "Good Pictures and Why," and told of the great need for good pictures in the home and school. She showed a number of good pictures telling how they often lead children to right ideas and good character.

Mrs. J. Allen Johnson and Miss Mary Cochran, "Literature of Childhood," Mrs. Wells spoke on "The Woman's Work," and Mrs. J. Allen Johnson and Miss Mary Cochran, "Literature of Childhood," Mrs. Wells spoke on "The Woman's Work," and Mrs. J. Allen Johnson and Miss Mary Cochran, "Literature of Childhood."

Mrs. Brady and her assistants are to be congratulated on giving a very successful Institute, and giving pleasure to so many people.
